Mommy HOME

Mommy is having a hard time on the ride. Mommy is very tired. She's still not real strong from her last chemo sessions.

The wind against her as she rides is making her really tired. I told mommy to slow down and not go as fast, but mommy just laughed and said, "I'm not that tired."

My mommy's crazy.

But Megan and the Amazon Heart Thunder ladies bought mommy a windshield for the her bike so she won't be as tired. That's really cool. Mommy said that she didn't think that she could make it through the rest of the week because it's hard for her to hold onto the bike.

So I sent mommy a Harley Hug over the phone and mommy said that she could feel it and she feels so much better. But I still want her to have the windshield. My mommy don't quit (censored)! I heard daddy say that word.

Mommy also has to go see a doctor in the morning to get her tubes cleaned out. Mommy still has a chemo tube inside of her leg and it clogs up a little every day. Mommy's also having to drain her knee of fluid. But mommy does that herself. I'm not supposed to tell anyone on the Harley Report how she does it because Grandma and Grandpa reads this and mommy said that Grandma and Grandpa will be mad if they found out that Mommy uses a syringe on herself to drain her knee. Grandpa was a Marine, too, and would make mommy do pushups if he found out.

But mommy needs some help! She needs some powerful thoughts sent her way. So if you know my mommy and even if you don't know my mommy, think happy and strong thoughts for her to help her make the last few days of the trip.

Love you, Mommy!
