Cancer survivors ride into city

By Victoria Owen

 Comment

More than 20 women astride motorbikes roared into Oxford at the weekend to raise money for breast cancer charities.

Bikers arrive in Oxford

Each of the 22 bikers has battled against the disease and stopped in the city during the week-long Amazon Heart Thunder 2007 fundraising ride from Aviemore in Scotland to London.

They made an Oxford pit-stop to visit the headquarters of Harley Davidson in Garsington Road, Cowley, which is supporting the trip by giving each woman a bike.

The Amazon Heart Thunder ride has taken place in countries across the world, including Australia and America, and is designed to provide strength, support and inspiration for other breast cancer sufferers.

It raises money for Amazon Heart, an organisation that sends breast cancer survivors on adventures across the world, and the Helen RollasonHeal Cancer charity.
